DOMESTIC SAFETY STATEMENT

Since January 2010 when installing electronic gate automation systems, risk assessing, force testing, CE marking, declaration of conformity, documenting and the installation of adequate safety devices is now law. Beforehand it was only a recommendation. This is without exception from small domestic to high security commercial installations. Any company not providing this is breaking the law. Anyone thinking of installing a gate automation system should only use a company that provides this service.

As a responsible company we work to the British Standard Machinery Directives Umbrella EN13241-1 which encompasses EN12453, EN12445 EN12978 and EN1760-2 regulating the safe installation practices of automatic gates. We only manufacture and install to the highest standard and as such are only willing to use the best equipment for the job. This ensures our reputation and provides you the customer with a top quality, reliable, and above all safe installation.

All gate automation systems must be maintained by a reputable gate automation company. The system must be force tested and documented. The documentation must be held for 10 years. Any system that fails to comply should be electrically isolated and costs for the upgrade given to the customer. The system cannot be turned back on until the repairs and the force testing has been carried out. Any customer switching the system back on without carrying out the repairs and force testing the system, will be breaking the law and fully liable to prosecution.

These measures have been put in place to safeguard yourselves, your family and members of the public from injury.

If you have any questions relating to this statement please feel free to contact our office.

Your sincerely
